EASTER 2014 VOLUME 76, NO. 1

Lenten Meditations and Easter Mission

During Lent this year, for the third consecutive year, the Office of the Bishop compiled, edited and sent out daily meditations on scripture from writers all over Colorado. (You can still read them on the website at www.dico.org/lenen-meditations.html and see a small sampling on page 12.) They represented this year even more than in the past a diverse range of perspective and point of view, and reflected on experiences ranging from hospital chaplaincy to surviving this past fall's floods, to a terrible car accident, to the collapse of a church's roof. The richness and resonance of these unique experiences, shared through the lens of scripture and prayer, was indeed marvelous.

Here in the Office of the Bishop, we heard many good things about the meditations, individually and as a collection. We've had requests to continue the series (though at this time, unfortunately, such a continuation isn't practical). This collection of meditations is a window on to the mind and spirit of The Episcopal Church in Colorado – a body comprised of clergy and lay people, of young and old people, and of people from many different faith and theological perspectives, but it is a body joined together by prayer and by the holy stories of scripture and by service.

In these pages, you will also see that body at work – reaching out to communities impacted by last fall's floods, continuing to serve neighbors and neighborhoods, and providing a number of opportunities for children, youth and young adults to explore and deepen their own faith through new and innovative summer programs at Cathedral Ridge.

During Lent, we intentionally took time to nourish our individual and collective spirits, to cultivate new disciplines and to reach out in new ways. In this Easter season, as we celebrate Jesus' rebirth, we can also celebrate new life and health we have gained from these disciplines, and renewed joy and appreciation of our connection to ourselves and to God.

Read more about these programs and how to register on pages 2, 8 and 9.
